Subject: Net Neutrality Regulations

Dear FCC Commissioners:

I am writing to strongly oppose revisions to the existing FCC net neutrality regulations as articulated by the new Federal Communications Commission head, Ajit Pai, in recent public statements. I believe that broadband access must be treated as a public utility and should not be structured to favor large Internet provider corporations and large content providers able to pay for preferred high speed access.

Further, I strongly believe that comments provided by the general public should be given great weight in FCC determinations, and should not be discounted due to lack of specific knowledge of the technologies employed and/or the administrative structures in place or under consideration.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey Potent
